CEFR B2 Can-Do Outcomes

By the end of B2, learners should be able to:

- Understand the main ideas of complex spoken and written German, including abstract and technical discussions in familiar fields.
- Communicate fluently and spontaneously with native speakers without major difficulty.
- Use advanced grammar such as Konjunktiv I & II, passive constructions, relative clauses, participial constructions, infinitive clauses, and nominalization accurately.
- Organize ideas into coherent spoken and written texts using a wide range of connectors and natural word order.
- Read newspapers, reports, academic texts, and professional documents with good comprehension.
- Write structured emails, reports, essays, summaries, applications, and formal correspondence.
- Participate confidently in workplace meetings, presentations, interviews, and discussions.
- Function effectively in German-speaking professional, educational, and everyday environments at the CEFR B2 level.
